COMPETITIVE EXAMS OFFICE

COMPETITIVE EXAM PROCEDURE BASED ON QUALIFICATIONS, PUBLIC DISCUSSION FOR THE RECRUITMENT OF THREE (3) – JUNIOR - RESEARCHERS PURSUANT TO ART. 24, PARAGRAPH 3, LETTER A), OF LAW 240/2010 – PART TIME AND FULL TIME

Art. 1 – SUBJECT OF THE NOTICE

1. The procedure of comparative evaluation through qualifications, public discussion and oral test, for the recruitment of three (3) fixed-term Junior researchers, pursuant to art. 24, paragraph 3, letter a) of the law n. 240 of 30.12.2010 as indicated below:

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICAL BIOTECHNOLOGIES (DBM) n. 1 POSITION – PART TIME

- Research field: Medical sciences
- Academic recruitment field: 06/D1 - cardiovascular and respiratory diseases
- Academic discipline: MED/11 - cardiovascular diseases
- Research Project: “Hemodynamic cardiac overload detection by the new telemonitoring devices implanted during transcatheter mitral edge-to-edge repair and its correlation with noninvasive advanced echocardiographic markers of left ventricular filling pressures in patients with severe mitral regurgitation.”
- Research activities: Speckle tracking echocardiography-derived left atrial strain (LAS) showed a strong correlation with filling pressures in heart failure (HF). Since HF decompensation starts with increased LA pressure and later ends with congestive symptoms and hospitalization, intracardiac devices for continuous telemonitoring of LA pressures were developed and tested. A wireless remote monitoring system directly measures LA pressure, with bidirectional communication with an artificial intelligent external unit, reviewed by clinicians. Transcatheter edge-to-edge mitral valve repair (TEER) is an endovascular procedure for severe mitral regurgitation (MR) whose candidates are mainly patients with HF and secondary MR symptomatic despite medical therapy. The project will assess the potential value of LAS as predictor of increased LA pressure assessed by an implanted device in patients undergoing TEER. The changes of LA pressure after removal of MR hemodynamic overload at rest or during efforts and clinical outcome will be investigated.

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE, SURGERY AND NEUROSCIENCE (DSMCN) n. 1 POSITION – FULL TIME

- Research field: Medical sciences
- Academic recruitment field: 06/D1 - cardiovascular and respiratory diseases
- Academic discipline: MED/10 - respiratory diseases
- Research Project: “Prognostic biomarkers of lung rejection in lung transplanted patients.”
- Research activities: Acute cellular rejection (ACR) and mediated rejection (AMR) are post-lung transplant complications that compromise patient survival. These two types of rejection are risk factors for the development of chronic graft dysfunction and need to be analyzed in depth. The aim of the present project is to study potential clinical-immunological and radiological biomarkers predictive of prognosis and response to treatment in lung transplanted patients.

The researcher will contribute to lung transplant program activities at the Respiratory Disease Unit of the AOUS. He will participate in the recruitment and multidisciplinary evaluation of potential transplant candidates. It will contribute to the management of patients in the pre- and post-intervention phases.

- Academic discipline: MED/21 - thoracic surgery
- Research Project: “Evaluation of EVLP impact in lung preservation and riconditioning through the research of inflammatory and cell damage markers in the perfusate during normo-thermic perfusion.”
- Research activities: Ex vivo lung perfusion (EVLP) represents a potentially important advance in the preservation of donor lungs prior to transplantation. During reconditioning in EVLP, the lungs are perfused and simultaneously ventilated in normothermia, with the aim to make it possible to monitor and evaluate their functionality over time, and thus be able to select which organs are actually suitable for implantation. The project involves the evaluation of the quality of the graft through the measurement over time of inflammation markers (including CRP, ESR, interleukin 6) and cell damage factors (including Krebs von den Lungen-6KL-6, lung-specific damage protein alveolar) within the perfusate of the EVLP circuit during organ reconditioning, in order to provide support in deciding which organs are suitable for implantation. Secondary endpoint will be serial evaluation of markers in order to identify the correct timing for perfusion interruption, in order to avoid cellular damage induced by the same reperfusion and mechanical ventilation.

The researcher will be actively involved in the multidisciplinary management of the transplant candidate for possible inclusion on the list. He will participate in the evaluation and harvesting of the organ (including ex vivo reconditioning of the graft) and in the surgical phase of the lung transplant. It will also contribute to the patient's care management in the immediate post-operative period and in the various phases of follow-up.
