

GUIDELINES FOR THE TEACHING ACTIVITIES IN THE SECOND SEMESTER OF THE 2020/21 A.Y.

(approved by the Academic Senate and the Managing Board on 9 and 12 February 2021)

Given the evolution of the Covid-19 pandemics, the Academic Senate and the Managing Board of the University of Siena provide the following operational instructions.

All teaching activities of the second semester of the academic year 2020/21 of undergraduate, master, doctoral and specialization courses will take place in dual mode. Every single course will be delivered in presence and simultaneously broadcasted in live streaming. Registration of the lectures and their subsequent upload on the University portal for remote use is recommended.

All practical and lab educational activities are also carried out in person (including activities dedicated to thesis work).

Departments are free to adapt the aforementioned rules to specific circumstances, always providing the possibility of following the lectures in remote for students unable to be present at the university complexes.

Course and graduation exams continues to be regulated by the guidelines issued on Jan.13.

Curricular and non-curricular internships, both internal and external, can also be carried out in presence, unless otherwise agreed with the host organizations.

Libraries and reading rooms are regularly open, with access regulated through reservation. Opening hours will be extended, yet complying with the measures established to limit the circulation of people.

The departments and all the structures necessary for carrying out the research activities remain regularly open.

All members of the community must strictly comply with the security measures in force in the university buildings aimed at preventing the spread of the infection (hand sanitation, mandatory use of masks, prohibition of gathering), while the University is committed to daily sanitize rooms and surfaces.

The presence in all university spaces and the carrying out of the aforementioned educational and research activities in presence take place in compliance with the safety requirements set out in the University Protocol, and by means of attendance-tracking tools (signatures) for personnel not provided with the entrance badge, also enforcing limitations to the access routes to the university buildings.

All meetings must be held digitally.

Further operational instructions are contained in the attachment document.
